

HINMAN SATISFIED WITH TOUR IN CITY

Prepares for Busy Final Week in Upstate Districts.

HIS CLOSING SPEECH HERE NEXT SATURDAY

Bryan's Secretary Supporting Hennessy Shows Administration's Attitude.

Ex-Senator Harvey D. Hinman, after three days of vigorous campaigning in New York City and Westchester County, returned to his home in Ringhams yesterday. Before leaving, Senator Hinman said he was much pleased with his reception here, and that he had been assured by the Republican leaders that his candidacy for Governor was well received.

Senator Hinman has a busy closing week of campaigning before him, as he has his rivals for the first place on the Republican ticket, District Attorney Whitman and Job E. Hedges, leaving Ringhams to-day, he will go to Jamestown, where he will meet the Republican leaders of Chautauque, Allegany and Cattaraugus counties.

On Tuesday night he will speak before four or five audiences in Buffalo. On Wednesday he will have a talk with Orleans County leaders at Albion, and that night he will speak in Liberty, Sullivan County, and he will close his primary campaign with speeches Friday night in Brooklyn and Saturday night in Manhattan.

Whitman will round out his campaign with speeches on Monday and Tuesday night in Brooklyn; in Watertown on Wednesday night, in Buffalo on Thursday, at the county fair in Hamburg; in Syracuse on Friday night and on Saturday he will speak in Paulding and Poughkeepsie, and if he can make train connections he will wind up his campaign on Saturday night with speeches in Manhattan.

The Hennessy-Roosevelt anti-Murphy campaign will end this week, with meetings every night, at the greater city. Both Hennessy and Roosevelt, speaking several times each night. Robert Adamson, Fire Commissioner, and John J. Hopper will provide at some of these meetings.

The big Hennessy meeting will be at the City Hall, Brooklyn, on Monday and Tuesday, where Hennessy will speak for two hours. According to his campaign managers, the anti-Murphy campaign will unfold some new history concerning Governor Glynn and Leader Murphy, which will, as one of them put it last night, "put a crimp in Mr. Glynn's campaign for once and for all."

The Hennessy headquarters yesterday issued this hot shot against Ambassador Gerard and Governor Glynn: "As further evidence of the anti-American attitude of the State Department at Washington, views Ambassador Gerard's affiliation with Charles E. Murphy's Delmonico-made ticket, it was stated yesterday that Mr. Glynn, representing Secretary of State William Jennings Bryan, will speak every night in greater New York during the coming week for Franklin D. Roosevelt, the anti-Murphy candidate, and John A. Hennessy, the anti-Murphy candidate for Governor, Mr. Wyvell is the personal secretary of Mr. Bryan."

BOY BANDITS ROB CITIZENS OF $400

Two of Gang Caught by Police. One Receiving a Bullet in His Leg.

Emulating the Tracy gang, Jesse James and other outlaws of the plains, half a dozen boys turned highway robbers in Canal St., early last evening and did their work so well that they collected $400 from a score of victims. In the evening the police took a hand, and two of the young bandits were captured. One of them is in St. Vincent's Hospital with a bullet in his leg, the result of trying to elude the detectives who endeavored to halt the others are still at large with the $400.

About 6 o'clock copious complaints began to pour into police headquarters. Men, women and children telephoned that a gang of boy bandits, at Canal Ave. West, were knocking people down and robbing them.

Detectives Quinn and Dalton went to the scene and found the elude bandits, who were on the sidewalks and had just taken a $8 from his pockets. When the detectives appeared the bandits scattered, and Dalton, after a chase of several blocks, finally stopped one with a shot in his leg. Quinn, meanwhile, captured another.

The wounded boy is John Wallace, seventeen years old, of 64 Charlton St., and the other boy is in St. Vincent's Hospital, charged with assault and robbery. Young Graw was taken in charge by the Children's Society.

John White, whom the boys were robbing, was arrested on a charge of intoxication. He lives at 158 West 50th St.

COURT DEFENDS FARMER

Jurist Says Countryman Has No Chance at City Bar.

Nyack, N. Y., Sept. 20.—Justice Joseph Merscher, in the Supreme Court, has gone on record as saying that a farmer does not stand a chance of getting justice in a legal contest in New York City.

The justice's remarks against John J. Thornton transferring his suit against the Nassau Electric Railroad Company from Orange County, where the plaintiff lives, to Kings County, New York City, Thornton, asked $2,000 for a broken arm suffered by his wife and injuries to himself in an accident in Brooklyn.

"If I were a farmer I wouldn't try a case in New York," said the court. "If they gave me a verdict in advance, the farmer does not stand a chance in New York, and I know it. He cannot get square compensation, and you know it."

A motion for the plaintiff for a change of venue was therefore denied.

CANOE UPSKITS: 1 SINKS

Lad Drowns, While Two Friends Reach Shore.

Roy Vale, seventeen years old, of 312 West 142d St., was drowned in the North River, opposite Interlaken Park, yesterday afternoon, when a canoe in which he was peddling with two other youths upset.

The three swam toward the Jersey shore, but 200 feet from the landing Vale collapsed and sank.

JOHN KEAN NEAR DEATH

Ex-U. S. Senator's Family Summoned to Bedside.

Elizabeth N. J., Sept. 20.—Ex-United States Senator John Kean is critically ill at his home here. His death is momentarily expected. The members of his family have been summoned and advised to prepare for the worst. Mr. Kean has been ill for several weeks.

CUT IN ALDERMEN'S SEATS

Old High Chairs Go in Refurbishing of Chamber.

The Board of Aldermen will meet in refurbished quarters to-morrow. The aldermanic chamber has had a thorough cleansing and a great deal of work has been done in refitting the walls and floor. High chairs and desks have been removed and replaced by smaller and more artistic furniture. The object has been to make the room resemble the meeting place of real legislators.

The Forty-five Club, its members being the fusion aldermen, will hold the first of its regular fall luncheons to-morrow. It is planned at future luncheons to have as guests delegates from the various clubs asked to give their views on needed legislation.

FIGHT TO INDICT CLEARY ON TO-DAY

Haverstraw Inflamed as District Attorney Gagan Combats Political Influence.

District Attorney Thomas Gagan, of Rockland County, will open his fight to have ex-Town Clerk William V. Cleary, of Haverstraw, indicted for the murder of his son-in-law, Eugene Newman, when the grand jury convenes before Supreme Court Justice Mills at New City to-day.

This will mark the first chapter in what promises to be a celebrated murder trial. Cleary, the Democratic boss of Haverstraw, is relying on his political influence to save him from indictment for murder in the first degree.

Fred Newman, father of the victim, who was shot and killed for eloping with Anna Cleary, has already shown political connections between Cleary and certain grand jurors drawn from Haverstraw to pass upon the case. Gagan, however, has promised to purge the grand jury of those who are prejudiced.

His first move it is expected, will be to object to Bernard Fox, a grand juror, who saw the shooting and the elopement. Fox, who is a Democrat, has been indicted for the murder of his son-in-law, Eugene Newman, when the grand jury convenes before Supreme Court Justice Mills at New City to-day.

The murder has greatly agitated Rockland County, and particularly Haverstraw, where the victim, Newman, was a prominent citizen. The latter has published several articles that have helped to inflame the people against Cleary. Mrs. Anna Cleary Newman, the widow of the victim, remains in seclusion.

KAISERS PATCH UP ROW

Separation Suit of Couple Secretly Ended.

That Mrs. Edith Oppenheimer Kaiser brought suit against her husband, Kaiser, for separation early last month, and that August 27 the suit was suddenly withdrawn and every effort made to keep the matter secret, became known recently in the apartment house where the Kaiser family lives.

Mrs. Kaiser is the daughter of Dr. Isaac Oppenheimer, and her husband is a lawyer, with offices at 206 Broadway. Mr. and Mrs. Kaiser have three married sons, seven years, and lived at 60 East 67th St., the home of Dr. Oppenheimer.

An application for alimony, pending for separation, was filed in the Supreme Court.

Soon after the filing of the suit the attorneys for Mr. and Mrs. Kaiser appeared before Justice Guy, of the Supreme Court, and asked his aid in suppressing the papers.

BOYS HID IN CAVE TO ESCAPE SCHOOL

Unlucky the Average American Boy, Four Youngsters of Harrison, N. J., Did Not Remain up Night before the Opening of School last week so they would surely be on time when the doors were thrown wide to receive them for another year of education.

They stayed up, or out, all night, however, and last night their parents had not seen them for a week. At the end of 7th St., near where the Lackawanna tracks run across the meadows, the youngsters were discovered yesterday sitting around a rough stove in a cave they had tunneled under the sidewalk. Remnants of a meal were there, and it was evident the boys had made their foraging expeditions profitable.

Just where the boys will go to school will be determined by the court. The truants and cave dwellers are Thomas Diamond, John Scanlon and Lockwood Crane, of Washington St., and John Vance.

Stabbed, Her Cries Bring Aid.

Traced by her screams, a woman known as Mrs. Andrew Poy was found yesterday in her apartment at 307 Seventh Ave., suffering from two stab wounds in the right arm. She told Patrolman Potter, of the Tenderloin station, that a man unknown to her forced his way into her home and after a quarrel stabbed her. She was taken to Bellevue.

JERSEY JUSTICE MAROONS BOY SAILOR OF FORTUNE

Vincent Murray, of Sea Fame, Caused Terror Among Peaceful Commuters by Target Practice in Answer to War Call, Police Say.

Vincent Murray, who hasn't been in the papers since last May, got himself arrested yesterday and spent last night in the lockup at Harrison, N. J. Vincent is the fifteen-year-old boy who had been sailing the seven seas for five years, when he was held up by immigration officials on his attempt to give up the lively seafaring life and enter the life of a landman.

The fact that he had an uncle, John Geraghty, at 11 Davis St., Harrison, helped some, and he finally came ashore and went to New Jersey. He has aged two years since then, according to the figures on file at the Harrison lockup, but life here has not been anywhere near as swift.

The European war broke out to relieve the monotony of doing nothing in the backyard of New Jersey, where Vincent's desire for the life of strife, So he came to New York and bought

MOB TRIES TO KILL

MAIL AUTO DRIVER

Chauffeur Stoned After Machine Crushes Boy Playing in Street.

A mob on the lower West Side last night hurled stones and bricks in an attempt to kill the driver of a United States mail automobile truck after the vehicle ran over nine-year-old Peter C. Cunnio, of 233 Ninth av.

The boy was playing on the avenue at 233d St. when the mail truck, which was directly in the path of the mail truck, a fore wheel passed over his right shoulder.

Frank Hubert, of 174 Alexander av., Bronx, driver of the truck, stopped his car and sought to place the boy inside to drive with him to a hospital. He was prevented from doing so by a crowd.

When the boy was finally sent to the New York Hospital in another automobile Hubert sought to drive out of 233d St. A shower of missiles flew at him from all directions. He turned about, but the bombardment continued. Finally he left his truck and ran to the West 20th St. police station.

At the hospital it was said that the victim, who was visiting his parents, set out for a ride, and was on the highway near Ellenburg, N. Y., when his mount took fright at an approaching touring car. Aiken pulled the horse to one side of the road, but him the horse reared, pitching its rider under the rear wheels of the machine.

Relatives of William Chapman, of Peekskill, received word yesterday that he had been injured in an automobile accident at Eldorado, Md. A car in which he was driving upset, throwing him out and causing the fracture of his left leg and two ribs.

Speeding home from a dance at the Plaza Hotel, N. Y. City, yesterday morning an automobile, in which Mrs. Hart S. Farlee, formerly one of the Wilder sisters, well known as tennis players, struck a stalled taxicab and was overturned.

Two other occupants of the car were hurled to the roadway with Mrs. Farlee. The latter was seriously injured, receiving a fracture of the skull, from which it is feared she may not recover. The other two, a young man, Frederick Wagner, also of Plainfield, and a young woman, were driving the automobile, received a fracture of the skull.

Valiant and Mrs. Farlee struck the ground head foremost, and were unconscious when picked up. They were taken to the Muhlenberg Hospital, near Plainfield. Both were in a critical condition last night.

JUSTICE SLOW, HE ENDS LIFE IN JAIL

Prisoner Dies by Rope After Denying Guilt in Weapon Case.

Arrested two months ago on a charge of carrying concealed weapons, David Duggert, thirty-one years old, of 65 Stratford Place, New York, committed suicide yesterday by hanging himself in his cell in the Queens County Jail, Long Island City. Although he asserted of his innocence and asked daily for a hearing, Duggert had been held since July 11 without trial.

Duggert was arrested in Far Rockaway on a charge of having a revolver and a blackjack in his possession. On July 17 he was arraigned before Magistrate Leach in the Far Rockaway police court, and was held for the action of the grand jury. Being unable to obtain bail, he was locked up in the jail in Long Island City.

In the last few months he had been visited frequently by his mother, wife and child, to all of whom he protested his innocence. He was unable to have his case considered by the authorities, and eventually his fate began to weigh on his mind. Meanwhile, it is alleged, judges and court attendants were taking their vacations with regularity, and consideration of Duggert's case therefore had to go over.

Yesterday morning Duggert accompanied the other prisoners in a walk about the jail yard, and when the religious exercises started he returned to his cell. There he tore his shirt in strings and hanged himself to the bars of his cell.

He left a note declaring that he was innocent and saying that the articles found upon him were the property of another man.

NEW OPEN MARTS WIN HEALTH O. K.

Praise from Goldwater After Inspection Tour of Four Markets.

Dr. Goldwater, Commissioner of the Department of Health, gave the new open markets a clean bill of health yesterday. His report, covering a Saturday inspection of four markets, was forwarded to Borough President Marks. Fifteen pounds of vegetables in all were condemned in the Manhattan Bridge, Queensboro Bridge and Harlem Bridge markets. In the Fort Lee Ferry Market everything passed muster.

Farmers' Bulletin 256, of the Department of Agriculture, has been reprinted by the Mayor's food supply committee and five thousand copies are ready for distribution. It is entitled "Food Inspection of Vegetables for the Table" and is a common sense, cook-book, devoted to vegetables. The food values of the various vegetables are given, and the most economical methods of cooking each. In a clear, concise way, the chemical reasons for certain economies of cooking are told.

Realizing that with sugar higher than usual a good part of an enormous fruit crop may go to waste because of the housewife's ignorance of canning, the Mayor's committee, headed by Mrs. Williams, cooking director of the Board of Education, compile sugarless canning recipes. Mrs. Williams is ready to give detailed instructions upon request. Her address is 500 Park av.

In general, to can fruit without sugar, it is boiled for thirty-five minutes or longer in the can, with the can cover about half fastened. When the cover must be tightened at once, vegetables may be preserved in the same way, a little salt being added to the water in the can.

"FOR A BAR'L" TRUCE OFF

Republican Senators May Resume Their Filibuster To-day.

Washington, Sept. 20.—The armed truce over the river and harbor bill may give way to a resumption of the fight when the Senate meets to-morrow. The Democratic leaders and the Republican filibusters did not find themselves in entire accord to-day and negotiations for drafting a substitute measure were called off.

There is still some doubt as to the attitude of the President. Senator Simmons will probably confer with him early to-morrow to ascertain whether or not he is opposed to the bill on which the Democrats are agreed. Some of the Democrats are disgruntled because the President has not said specifically that he is either for or against the bill which was the center of the protracted struggle in the Senate.

The establishment of a department of commerce for New York City, a project conceived by Commissioner Joseph Hartigan of the Bureau of Weights and Measures, has the hearty approval of William C. Redfield, United States Secretary of Commerce. Fred H. Tiebe, Deputy Commissioner of the Bureau of Weights and Measures, returned from Washington yesterday. In the course of conversation lasting an hour and a half Secretary Redfield congratulated New York on the idea and promised co-operation in Washington.

"Thank God!" exclaimed Secretary Redfield when Commissioner Hartigan's plans were outlined to him, "that New York at last realizes the importance of such a department."

The suggestion for the new department will be pressed upon Mayor Mitchell. Commissioner Hartigan will, as an expedient, the Mayor direct the Bureau of Weights and Measures take over the duties and responsibilities of the new department until, if it proves its worth, revision of the charter makes it permanent.

Not more than $15,000 will be required, it is said, to run the new department for the first year.

Every new industry that the department of commerce persuades to come to New York, Commissioner Hartigan pointed out, would have its effect upon the city's tax rate.

The following letter regarding the municipal department of commerce was sent by Secretary Redfield to Commissioner Hartigan:

"Naturally such a bureau will depend for its value upon the knowledge and character of the men who have the work in hand and upon the funds furnished for its support. You will need at least one man with a thorough knowledge of export trade and another well posted on marine and inland transportation. Your outlook must necessarily be a wide one, for to look inland from New York would be to cover but half the field. The city's outreach is toward all the lands abroad, as well as toward your own country. Your proposed department therefore should be made up to the greatest advantage of the city and to its still greater opportunity."

"I can quite assure you that this department, through the New York office of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, would co-operate with you in the fullest practical way and would take a keen, sympathetic interest in the progress of your work."

The following letter regarding the municipal department of commerce was sent by Secretary Redfield to Commissioner Hartigan:

"Naturally such a bureau will depend for its value upon the knowledge and character of the men who have the work in hand and upon the funds furnished for its support. You will need at least one man with a thorough knowledge of export trade and another well posted on marine and inland transportation. Your outlook must necessarily be a wide one, for to look inland from New York would be to cover but half the field. The city's outreach is toward all the lands abroad, as well as toward your own country. Your proposed department therefore should be made up to the greatest advantage of the city and to its still greater opportunity."

"I can quite assure you that this department, through the New York office of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, would co-operate with you in the fullest practical way and would take a keen, sympathetic interest in the progress of your work."

The following letter regarding the municipal department of commerce was sent by Secretary Redfield to Commissioner Hartigan:

"Naturally such a bureau will depend for its value upon the knowledge and character of the men who have the work in hand and upon the funds furnished for its support. You will need at least one man with a thorough knowledge of export trade and another well posted on marine and inland transportation. Your outlook must necessarily be a wide one, for to look inland from New York would be to cover but half the field. The city's outreach is toward all the lands abroad, as well as toward your own country. Your proposed department therefore should be made up to the greatest advantage of the city and to its still greater opportunity."

"I can quite assure you that this department, through the New York office of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, would co-operate with you in the fullest practical way and would take a keen, sympathetic interest in the progress of your work."

The following letter regarding the municipal department of commerce was sent by Secretary Redfield to Commissioner Hartigan:

"Naturally such a bureau will depend for its value upon the knowledge and character of the men who have the work in hand and upon the funds furnished for its support. You will need at least one man with a thorough knowledge of export trade and another well posted on marine and inland transportation. Your outlook must necessarily be a wide one, for to look inland from New York would be to cover but half the field. The city's outreach is toward all the lands abroad, as well as toward your own country. Your proposed department therefore should be made up to the greatest advantage of the city and to its still greater opportunity."

"I can quite assure you that this department, through the New York office of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, would co-operate with you in the fullest practical way and would take a keen, sympathetic interest in the progress of your work."

The following letter regarding the municipal department of commerce was sent by Secretary Redfield to Commissioner Hartigan:

"Naturally such a bureau will depend for its value upon the knowledge and character of the men who have the work in hand and upon the funds furnished for its support. You will need at least one man with a thorough knowledge of export trade and another well posted on marine and inland transportation. Your outlook must necessarily be a wide one, for to look inland from New York would be to cover but half the field. The city's outreach is toward all the lands abroad, as well as toward your own country. Your proposed department therefore should be made up to the greatest advantage of the city and to its still greater opportunity."

"I can quite assure you that this department, through the New York office of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, would co-operate with you in the fullest practical way and would take a keen, sympathetic interest in the progress of your work."

The following letter regarding the municipal department of commerce was sent by Secretary Redfield to Commissioner Hartigan:

"Naturally such a bureau will depend for its value upon the knowledge and character of the men who have the work in hand and upon the funds furnished for its support. You will need at least one man with a thorough knowledge of export trade and another well posted on marine and inland transportation. Your outlook must necessarily be a wide one, for to look inland from New York would be to cover but half the field. The city's outreach is toward all the lands abroad, as well as toward your own country. Your proposed department therefore should be made up to the greatest advantage of the city and to its still greater opportunity."

"I can quite assure you that this department, through the New York office of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, would co-operate with you in the fullest practical way and would take a keen, sympathetic interest in the progress of your work."

The following letter regarding the municipal department of commerce was sent by Secretary Redfield to Commissioner Hartigan:

"Naturally such a bureau will depend for its value upon the knowledge and character of the men who have the work in hand and upon the funds furnished for its support. You will need at least one man with a thorough knowledge of export trade and another well posted on marine and inland transportation. Your outlook must necessarily be a wide one, for to look inland from New York would be to cover but half the field. The city's outreach is toward all the lands abroad, as well as toward your own country. Your proposed department therefore should be made up to the greatest advantage of the city and to its still greater opportunity."

"I can quite assure you that this department, through the New York office of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, would co-operate with you in the fullest practical way and would take a keen, sympathetic interest in the progress of your work."

The following letter regarding the municipal department of commerce was sent by Secretary Redfield to Commissioner Hartigan:

"Naturally such a bureau will depend for its value upon the knowledge and character of the men who have the work in hand and upon the funds furnished for its support. You will need at least one man with a thorough knowledge of export trade and another well posted on marine and inland transportation. Your outlook must necessarily be a wide one, for to look inland from New York would be to cover but half the field. The city's outreach is toward all the lands abroad, as well as toward your own country. Your proposed department therefore should be made up to the greatest advantage of the city and to its still greater opportunity."

"I can quite assure you that this department, through the New York office of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, would co-operate with you in the fullest practical way and would take a keen, sympathetic interest in the progress of your work."

The following letter regarding the municipal department of commerce was sent by Secretary Redfield to Commissioner Hartigan:

"Naturally such a bureau will depend for its value upon the knowledge and character of the men who have the work in hand and upon the funds furnished for its support. You will need at least one man with a thorough knowledge of export trade and another well posted on marine and inland transportation. Your outlook must necessarily be a wide one, for to look inland from New York would be to cover but half the field. The city's outreach is toward all the lands abroad, as well as toward your own country. Your proposed department therefore should be made up to the greatest advantage of the city and to its still greater opportunity."

"I can quite assure you that this department, through the New York office of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, would co-operate with you in the fullest practical way and would take a keen, sympathetic interest in the progress of your work."

REDFIELD TO AID CITY TRADE PLAN

Says Hartigan's Commerce Project Will Prove of Great Value.

Washington, Sept. 20.—The armed truce over the river and harbor bill may give way to a resumption of the fight when the Senate meets to-morrow. The Democratic leaders and the Republican filibusters did not find themselves in entire accord to-day and negotiations for drafting a substitute measure were called off.

There is still some doubt as to the attitude of the President. Senator Simmons will probably confer with him early to-morrow to ascertain whether or not he is opposed to the bill on which the Democrats are agreed. Some of the Democrats are disgruntled because the President has not said specifically that he is either for or against the bill which was the center of the protracted struggle in the Senate.

The establishment of a department of commerce for New York City, a project conceived by Commissioner Joseph Hartigan of the Bureau of Weights and Measures, has the hearty approval of William C. Redfield, United States Secretary of Commerce. Fred H. Tiebe, Deputy Commissioner of the Bureau of Weights and Measures, returned from Washington yesterday. In the course of conversation lasting an hour and a half Secretary Redfield congratulated New York on the idea and promised co-operation in Washington.

"Thank God!" exclaimed Secretary Redfield when Commissioner Hartigan's plans were outlined to him, "that New York at last realizes the importance of such a department."

The suggestion for the new department will be pressed upon Mayor Mitchell. Commissioner Hartigan will, as an expedient, the Mayor direct the Bureau of Weights and Measures take over the duties and responsibilities of the new department until, if it proves its worth, revision of the charter makes it permanent.

Not more than $15,000 will be required, it is said, to run the new department for the first year.

Every new industry that the department of commerce persuades to come to New York, Commissioner Hartigan pointed out, would have its effect upon the city's tax rate.

The following letter regarding the municipal department of commerce was sent by Secretary Redfield to Commissioner Hartigan:

"Naturally such a bureau will depend for its value upon the knowledge and character of the men who have the work in hand and upon the funds furnished for its support. You will need at least one man with a thorough knowledge of export trade and another well posted on marine and inland transportation. Your outlook must necessarily be a wide one, for to look inland from New York would be to cover but half the field. The city's outreach is toward all the lands abroad, as well as toward your own country. Your proposed department therefore should be made up to the greatest advantage of the city and to its still greater opportunity."

"I can quite assure you that this department, through the New York office of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, would co-operate with you in the fullest practical way and would take a keen, sympathetic interest in the progress of your work."

The following letter regarding the municipal department of commerce was sent by Secretary Redfield to Commissioner Hartigan:

"Naturally such a bureau will depend for its value upon the knowledge and character of the men who have the work in hand and upon the funds furnished for its support. You will need at least one man with a thorough knowledge of export trade and another well posted on marine and inland transportation. Your outlook must necessarily be a wide one, for to look inland from New York would be to cover but half the field. The city's outreach is toward all the lands abroad, as well as toward your own country. Your proposed department therefore should be made up to the greatest advantage of the city and to its still greater opportunity."

"I can quite assure you that this department, through the New York office of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, would co-operate with you in the fullest practical way and would take a keen, sympathetic interest in the progress of your work."

The following letter regarding the municipal department of commerce was sent by Secretary Redfield to Commissioner Hartigan:

"Naturally such a bureau will depend for its value upon the knowledge and character of the men who have the work in hand and upon the funds furnished for its support. You will need at least one man with a thorough knowledge of export trade and another well posted on marine and inland transportation. Your outlook must necessarily be a wide one, for to look inland from New York would be to cover but half the field. The city's outreach is toward all the lands abroad, as well as toward your own country. Your proposed department therefore should be made up to the greatest advantage of the city and to its still greater opportunity."

"I can quite assure you that this department, through the New York office of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, would co-operate with you in the fullest practical way and would take a keen, sympathetic interest in the progress of your work."

The following letter regarding the municipal department of commerce was sent by Secretary Redfield to Commissioner Hartigan:

"Naturally such a bureau will depend for its value upon the knowledge and character of the men who have the work in hand and upon the funds furnished for its support. You will need at least one man with a thorough knowledge of export trade and another well posted on marine and inland transportation. Your outlook must necessarily be a wide one, for to look inland from New York would be to cover but half the field. The city's outreach is toward all the lands abroad, as well as toward your own country. Your proposed department therefore should be made up to the greatest advantage of the city and to its still greater opportunity."

"I can quite assure you that this department, through the New York office of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, would co-operate with you in the fullest practical way and would take a keen, sympathetic interest in the progress of your work."

The following letter regarding the municipal department of commerce was sent by Secretary Redfield to Commissioner Hartigan:

"Naturally such a bureau will depend for its value upon the knowledge and character of the men who have the work in hand and upon the funds furnished for its support. You will need at least one man with a thorough knowledge of export trade and another well posted on marine and inland transportation. Your outlook must necessarily be a wide one, for to look inland from New York would be to cover but half the field. The city's outreach is toward all the lands abroad, as well